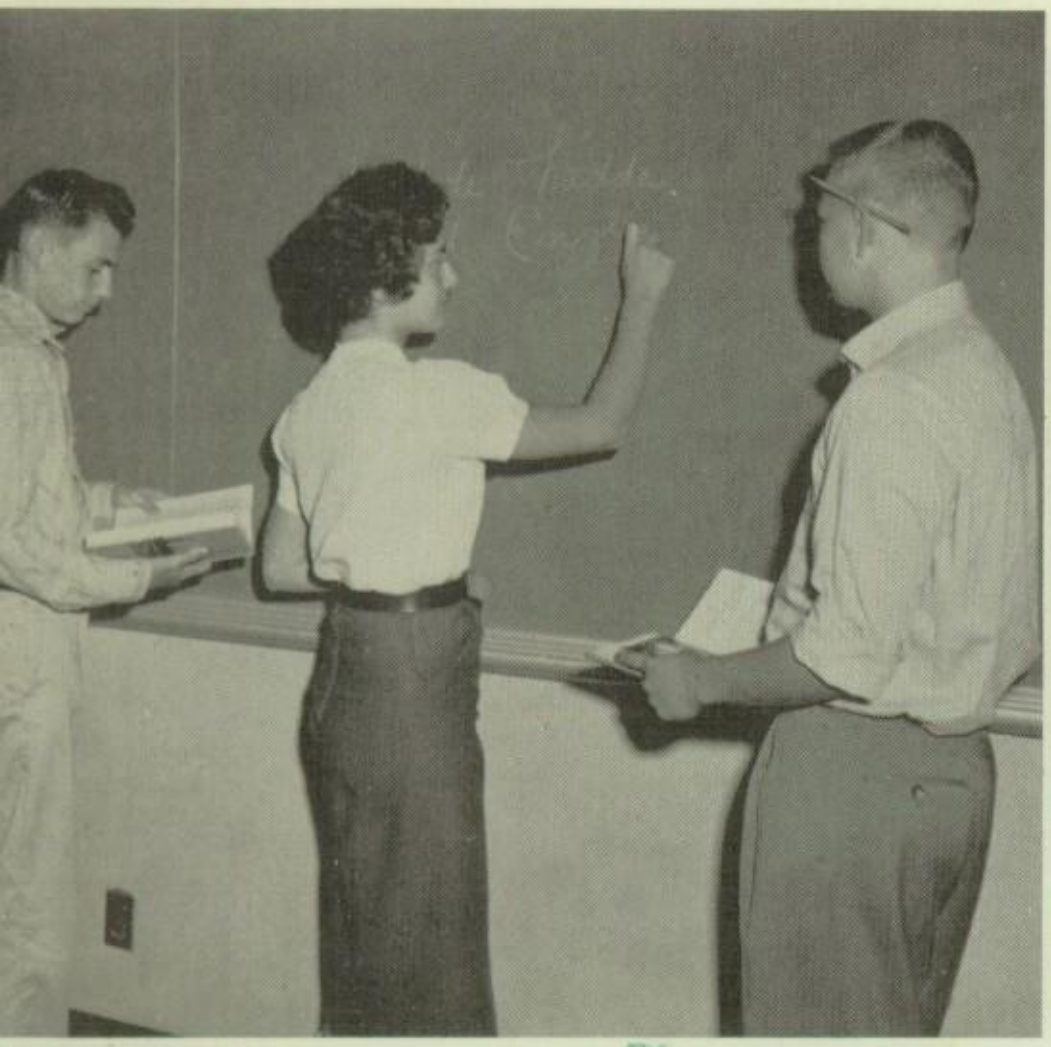
"Olde English Scholars"—Loretta Sell demonstrates the effect of Old English spelling on present-day words to Dennis Dilliplane and Scott Harper.



It says right here—Jimmy Huie stresses a point to panel members, Carol Waldman and Nancy Mann.

ENGLISH LITERATURE — Lending ears to Caesar, watching ghosts with Macbeth, or slicing off heads with the French patriots, the students of literature absorb plots of the required reading for high school. Material covered ranges from the American authors to the origin of writing in early Britain. ENGLISH APPLIED—Putting acquired knowledge into practical situations balances the curriculum of all our English courses. Sometimes this is accomplished by making speeches, in theme writing, or in the form of panel discussions. Another phase is covered by book reports in all classes. ENGLISH GRAMMAR—"Words, words, words!" Taking them apart, putting them back together, and rearranging them is a problem which confronts these young Websters. Sophs review basic structure to which juniors add more essentials. With this background the senior grammarians get finishing touches and close their books to high school English. ART—"Picasso in the rough!"—That describes the art room with all the artists experimenting with oils, charcoal, water colors and other materials. Creative ability and originality along with manipulative skills are encouraged to bring out the best in the students.

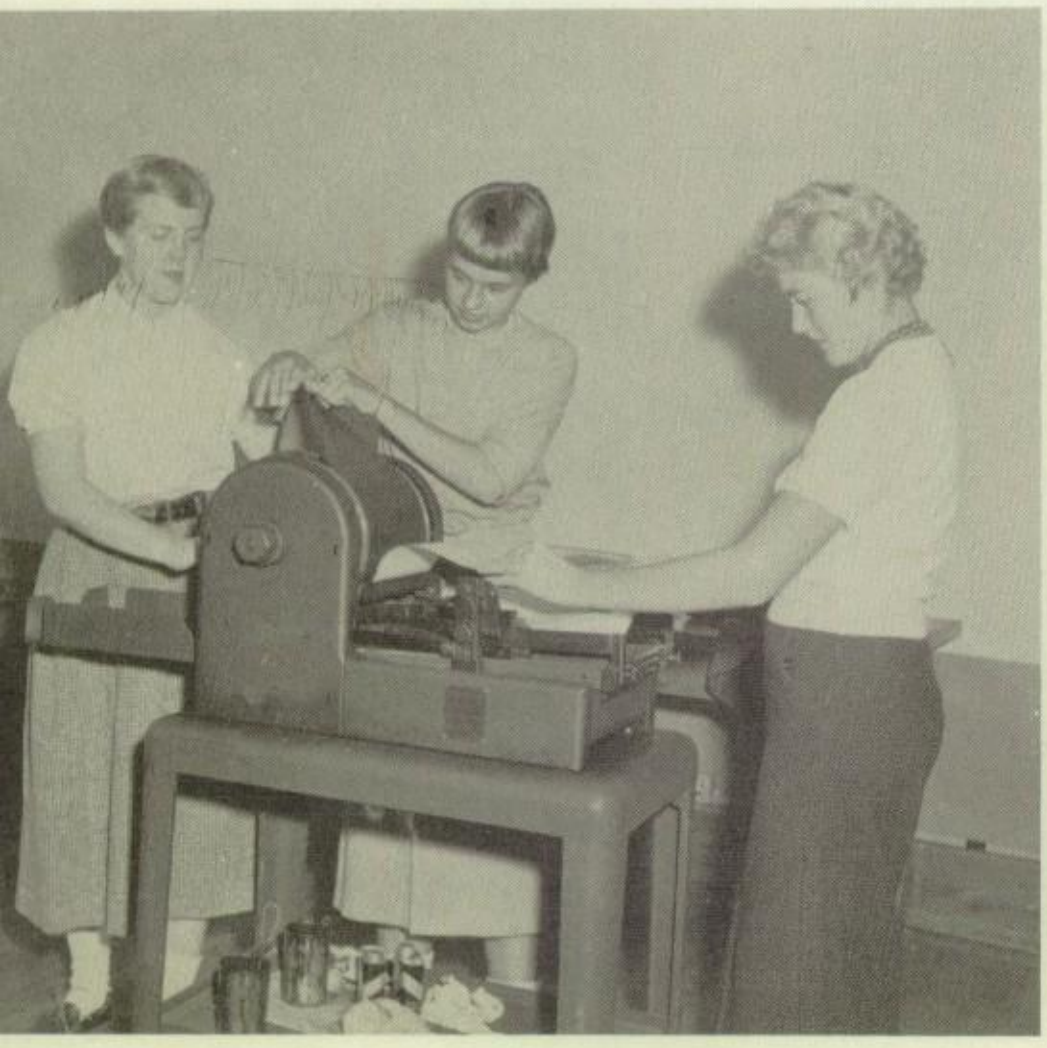
Don't just stand there, help me!—Diagramming sentences proves a challenge to Andrea Schlicker and Norman Garner.

Hold that pose!—Neil Dreibelbis sketches a portrait of Arlene Crouch in art class.

Keys to Success—Music provides a background for the typing of Fern Blanford, Joan Rowley, Harold Jackson, and Barbara Gregonis.

Balancing act—Marie Rowe shows Sandra Helbert the way to balance a budget.

TYPING—There are forty-seven keys to success in this class. It usually takes a while to find them all and use them accurately. The student also learns the mechanics and care of the typewriter. Typing to music plays another part in perfecting techniques. BOOKKEEPING—In this class the debits and credits are clashing constantly. It is the aim of the students to rearrange these major elements in order to make them balance. The procedure used can prove to be fascinating and quite a skill if mastered correctly. OFFICE PRACTICE—"Practice makes perfect." The students in this class seem to be striving for that goal. This class teaches office procedures and routines encountered in business and the practical application of the skills which have been acquired in typewriting, shorthand, and bookkeeping. One of these skills is stencil duplication. Most of the mimeograph work needed in the high school comes from this class. WORK PROGRAM—"Experience is the best teacher." This program gives the student a chance to apply what he has learned in the classroom, out in industry. The success of this program can be attributed to the practical experience developed therein.



Community project—Bella Brown and Judy Stettner give help to Sharon Dietrich in running off a stencil.

Number, please? — Barbara Gries tries her hand at operating the switchboard.

Storybook time — Engrossed in their study of Japan are Paul Bare and William Field.

Lend me your ears!—Martha Kline's current events report provides amusement for the P.O.D. class.

HISTORY—A special unit on Far Eastern history initiated this year kept sophs busy in Miss Willits' classes. Students followed the march of time from the prehistoric era through World War II. All this leads to a better understanding of modern world problems which is the purpose of studying history. P.O.D.—To study American democracy "from the bottom up" is the problem which confronts these seniors. Attending political rallies, conjuring special reports, witnessing actual courtroom procedures, and holding weekly current events discussions, all contribute to molding informed citizens. JOURNALISM I—Junior journalists are introduced to newspaper work and learn to use such words as editorializing, cut, flag, and boxed ears. Feature, news, and sports writing are mastered through projects and assignments for the cub reporters on the Observer staff. JOURNALISM II—In what seems a never ending attempt to meet coming deadlines, the journalism class works on stories for Observer and page layouts for the Muhltohi. Seniors also complete projects that include an evaluation of other school papers, biographical sketches, and play scripts.

Headline hunting — Pat Leinbach, Judith Yoh and James Richards watch as Nancy Evencovich writes a headline.

Author meets the critic — Karen Kunkel checks a story written by Mary Adams.

"Dry Bones"—Jay Abromowitch, Carol Miller, and Jeffrey Bell study bone structure in biology class.

Genius at work — Dennis Blair demonstrates a chemistry experiment as the onlookers take notes.

BIOLOGY—Connect them bones, them dry bones! Along with the bones of the human body the students study the oxygen cycle of plants and animals, heredity, and certain aspects of physiology. They also perform a few minor operations on frogs and earthworms. Everyone is required to hand a project in at the end of the year. CHEMISTRY—Featuring weekly lab periods, this class provides practical knowledge for future homemakers, scientists, and those entering the medical profession. Words such as valence, hydrogen, base, and usage of chemical equations become part of everyday language to these, our someday "Atoms for Peace" promoters. CHORUS—Strains of music fill the air whenever a girls' or boys' chorus meets in the music room for class. The year of singing is climaxed by participation in the Spring Concert with the mixed chorus, Muhlaires, and Muhlteers. BAND—"Music and athletics!"—as Mr. Harris usually exclaims, but actually, where would we be without our marching band and various combos? The different types of musical support at our football games, class plays, Muhl Revue, and other school functions are all typical of Muhlenberg.

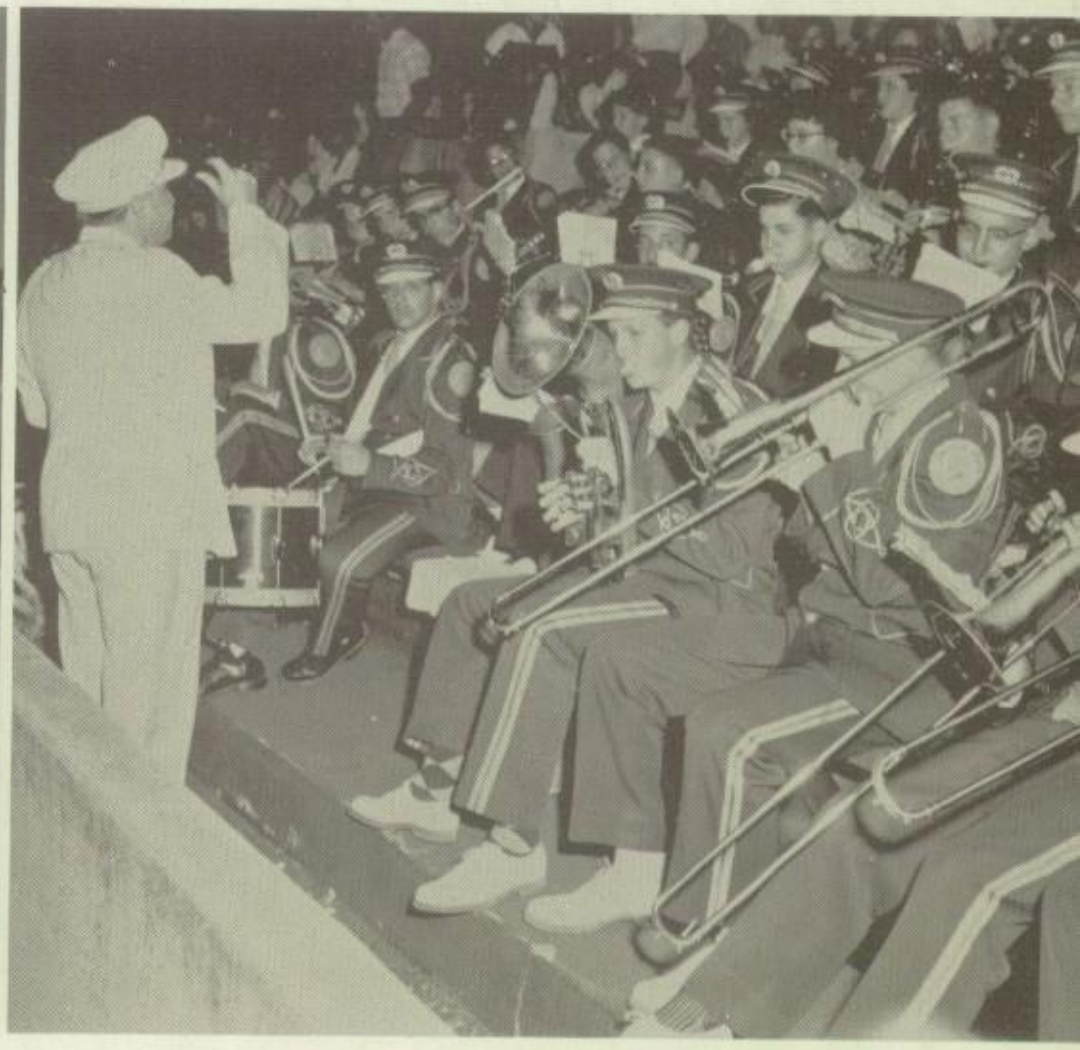
Music to chew gum by—Zigmund Gregonis records his voice in boys' chorus.



A one—a two—a three!—Director Henry Hoffman leads the band members in a pep song.

What makes you think that's right?—Leo Braun and Gerald Hain question Jeanette Goss's algebraic ability.

The Globetrotters—Robert Stull makes an angle for his audience of Nancy Sell, Ray Bailey, and Barry Helbert.

ALGEBRA—Although simple equations may sometimes be considered quite difficult, the students of algebra keep their minds active learning equations, factoring, square roots, and graph plotting. Two years of algebra also help to prepare the students in their future work in geometry. TRIGONOMETRY and SOLID GEOMETRY — Mathematics, the "perfect science," is climaxed at M. T. H. S. with "trig and solid" for some who expect to continue their education. Logarithms, the trigonometry functions, a touch of spherical trigonometry and exploring the third dimension in geometry are part of this course's requisite. GUIDANCE—No matter what you want to be, doctor, lawyer, or Indian chief, all vocational interests are tracked down in the guidance department and proper courses and subjects are selected accordingly. Counseling, parental interviews, testing programs, and college night, all are used in helping students to decide on a future career. LIBRARY—In this bookworm's paradise there are about 4,700 books on the shelf-lined walls. In a quiet atmosphere students make use of the reference books, periodicals, fiction, and non-fiction that are available. Card catalogs and "The Reader's Guide" help in locating needed information.

Future undecided—The Gottfried family discusses a college education with Miss Rahn.

Quiet, please!—In the library Larry Kelchner, Donna Williams, Charlotte Whitehead, and Carol Sensenig devote their time to study.

Watch out for my finger!—Instructions for using a lathe are given by Donald Ketterer to metal shop students Gerald Witman and Barry Hinkle.

Who says it's a man's world? Carl Volker examines Carol Waldman's planing job in wood shop.

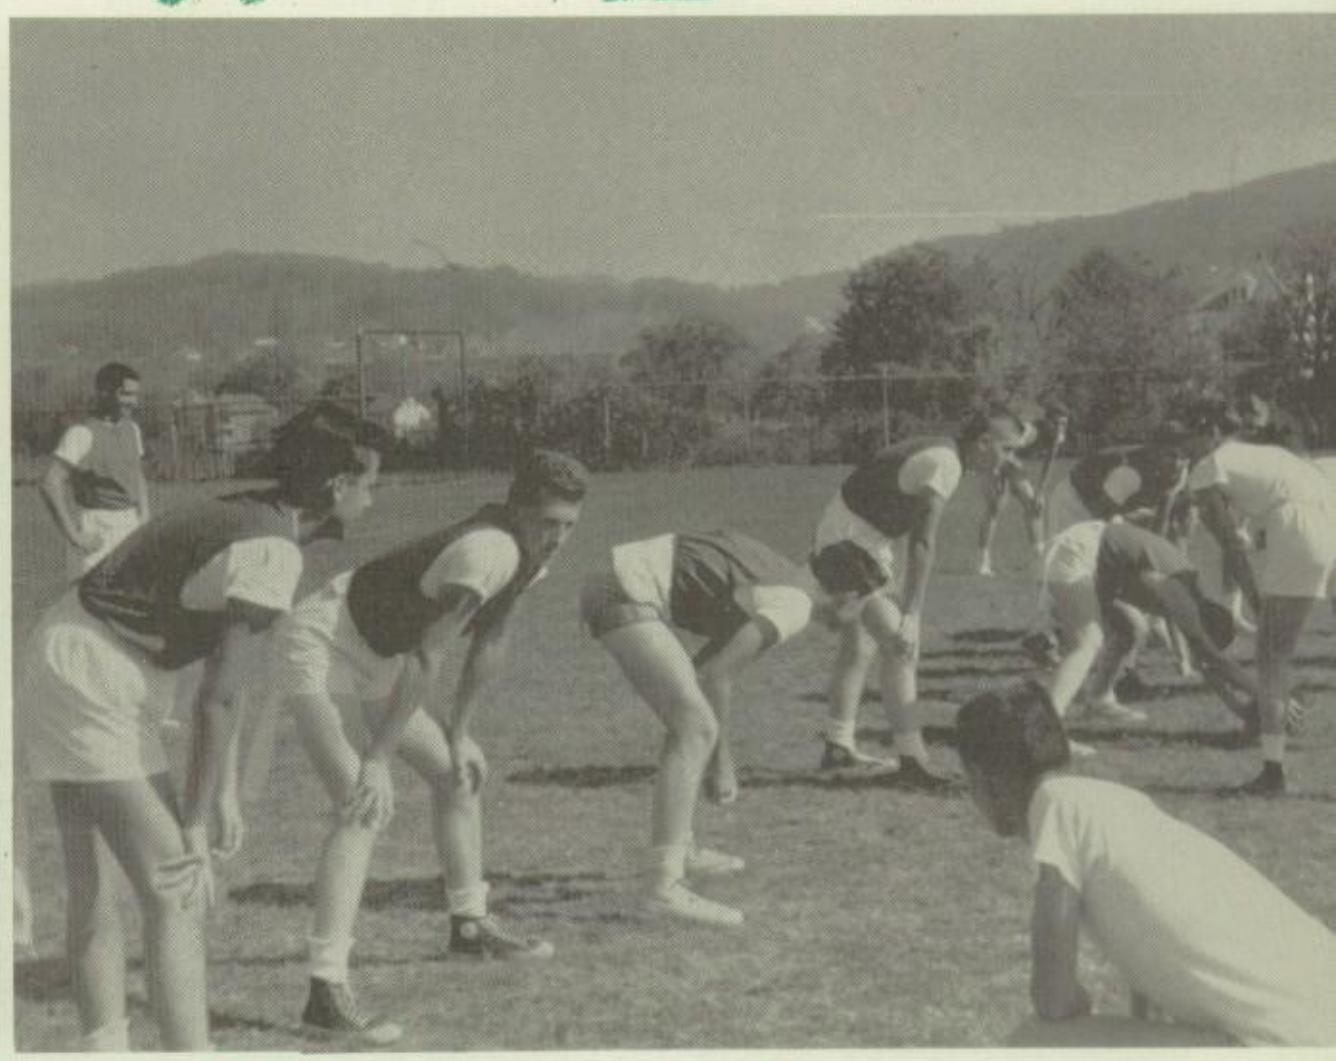
METAL SHOP—The machine age has taken over and boys in this class have an opportunity to learn the metal processes used in industry. Along with the construction of projects, auto mechanics is offered, giving hot-rod enthusiasts a chance to apply what they have learned. WOOD SHOP—The "do-it-yourselfers" are at it again. This current fad has come to the attention of Muhlenberg students by way of wood shop. Projects are required from each student which range from chests and night tables to bedroom suites. PRINT SHOP FURNITURE . . . pie . . . California job case . . . all these terms are in the everyday language of the high school printers. Special projects and jobs for school, such as stationery, excuse blanks, and pass slips make up a year's work in the print shop. MECHANICAL DRAWING—Man the drawing boards! Future draftsmen learn the trade by starting with consumer's education and fundamentals of drawing. The course is deepened with a technical study of industrial drawings and architectural drawing is brought out by designing home plans.

rinter's dummies—Samuel Weidenhammer and Dennis Till run the rinting press while Allen Fogelman sets the type.

No fair peeking—Harvey Smith and Harold Swoyer print blueprints in mechanical drawing class.

Wrapped up in their work—Geraldine Wahl examines the bandage applied by Jo-Ann Wrentzel and Mary Tobias.

Don't pull my tail!—Senior boys in spread formation for flag football.



HEALTH—A lost art of "mummy-making" is unraveled in the form of first aid classes in eleventh grade. "Safety first!" in home and industry is a slogan adopted by the health students who witness Carpenter Steel's exhibit on industrial safety precautions which is displayed at Open House. PHYSICAL EDUCATION—"Energy converted into motion" is one way to describe gym classes. Speedball, a combination of soccer, basketball, and football, was introduced in the girls' classes this year. Flag football, basketball, soccer, and baseball make up a schedule for boys' gym. COOKING—"The egg and I." This does not sum up cooking class but you must admit it plays a big part. The students investigate the different methods of preserving foods such as freezing and canning. Each girl, for the year's project, presents a fifteen minute demonstration on food preparation and serving. SEWING—Whirring machines, nimble fingers, and darting needles, all are symbols of the sewing room and its industrious seamstresses. Swedish weaving is learned and used for decorating placemats, aprons, and skirts. Garment-making is the main work of the class with a required number of articles in the year.

Happy homemakers—Nancy Ulmer watches as Carole Ketner and Joan Zarycta open a jar of peaches.

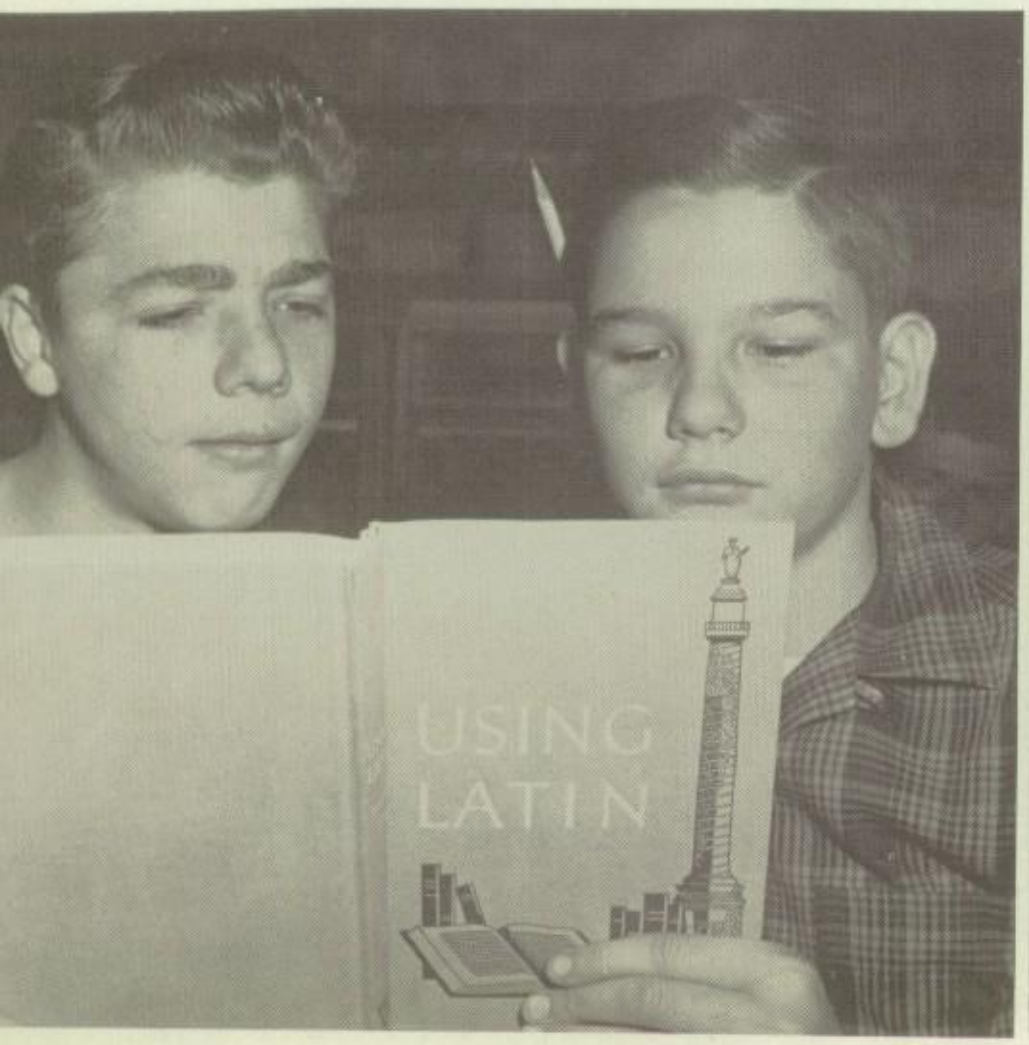
Snappy seamstress sewing—The motor hums as Carol Miller tries her hand at dressmaking.

Pay up!—Judy Schoffstall pays the fee for talking English, as the Spanish "What's My Line" panel watches.

"Ist das nett!"—German I class follows Willard Ritzman in singing "Snitzelbank."

SPANISH CASITA!—Senoritas and senores tackle translations and struggle to speak the Spanish language with the help of "no-English days," Christmas celebrations south of the border style, and tape-recorder sessions for diction improvements. GERMAN—Ist das nette ein Snittzelbank? German singing and folklore provide an atmosphere for the routine learning of case endings and verb conjugations. Caroling at Christmas time and attending a church service as a part of the "Maifest," a May celebration, round out a year of German. LATIN—They came, they saw, they try to conquer.

The students at Muhlenberg are taught Latin as a bisis for many fields and careers. They learn that many present-day words are derived from this language and that they are used extensively in the scientific field. DRIVER TRAINING—The jokes about women drivers are no longer true after a course in driver training. Students learn that safety and courtesy are keywords when sitting behind the wheel. A final reward is the sought-after driver's license which is received after passing the state test.



t's Greek to me!—Puzzling over their Latin assignments are Dennis Zahn and Kenneth Reitz.

By the way, this is the engine—James Purdon, Michael Renzo, and Charles Biscanti listen to the motor hum as Mr. Fetterman points out parts.

SUPERINTENDENT — MR. JOHN W. KHOURI

SUPERINTENDENT'S MESSAGE

Dear Friends:

". . . and lie down to pleasant dreams." So W. C. Bryant ended his poem Thanatopsis and to him dreams were to be indulged in after work had ceased. Dreams are pretty—not practical. Dreams are fantasy—not fact. Dreams are like the magic mirror in Snow White; we see ourselves as we want to be seen. Dreams are the hope for tomorrow, the excuse for today. Dreams are cloud-like, aimless, drifting. Dreams are opiates. But dreams can, also, be sparks of creativity, sparks which must be handled with care. Kipling said, "If you can dream . . . and not make dreams your master." This is the secret, the formula, the ratio. A noted psychologist said, "95 percent of the people think an aimless, desultory, gossipy flow of ideas and only 5 percent aim definitely direct, and definitely arrive at conclusions." Thomas Edison, when asked if his inventive genius was due to inspiration replied, "Yes, 5 percent inspiration and 95 percent perspiration." Young friends, there is no substitute for work. Success may be yours but it is spelled WORK. Dreams are fun but they won't pay off. Work is sacrifice—it will pay off.

It is your choice.

Sincerely,
JOHN W. KHOURI

You're a wonderful guy, who I like so much. ☆
I hope you always remember all the fun
we've had together like the dances, babysitting, and laughing and joking other things. I hope you always keep easy to get along with, as you are always stay as nice and I hope you don't forget me when you go into the navy. (I don't really think you will.) Don't worry I'll be good while you are away two years.
Love Always

Jerry,
To a real screaming character who should get a new records for the gym. Lots of luck and success in all you do. Bob L.

Jerry
To a real swell
guy. Don't forget all the good times we used to have. Keep that swell sense of humor of yours & I am sure you will succeed. Lots of luck to you.
whatever you decide to do. Be good. and don't do anything I wouldn't do.
Always Remember

Darn
Lots of luck
on the outside to a real nice guy. You have a lot of fun with. Never forget the good times we had.
